(57) Abstract :
 The goal of this work would be to develop a model for converting phrase movement issues into a mathematical structure that could be handled by an Intelligent Tutoring System (ITS). Initially, the features of movement issues were classified, and also a structure for such classifications was also suggested. Graph theory, as well as reverse and inward linking machine learning methods, have been used to tackle most sorts of issues. The application of graph theory with movement issues and creates proof that such a system handles nearly every movement issue. Lastly, the suggested method could be suggested particular implementation within instructional systems within the framework of conflict resolution.

(57) Abstract :

Multiple program tools in developing marketing strategy had been created in its subject of supply chain management (SCM). We present a resolution idea, business process integration (BPI), that combines workflows or enterprise application integration (EAI) technologies that will tackle the issue of network production for executing preparing products. BPI includes two distinguishing features. The first step is to create the bare minimum of business procedures for exchanging real-time data with preparing products without affecting other operations. The second option is to use EAI technologies to connect many devices and use a workflow application to control its implementation. Provide numerous layout patterns or integration connectors depending upon these principles. Our research demonstrates that a targeted technology could be produced with fewer workers, at fewer periods, and with greater efficiency employing BPI than with other methodologies.

(57) Abstract :

This invention describes a smart lighting and navigating system for the streets powered by solar energy obtained using perovskites arranged on the lighting poles. It can wirelessly communicate between all the smart lighting units arranged across the city to obtain the real-time status of the traffic and the direction in which the traffic needs to be directed. It has a unit to collect wearable masks, sanitise them in real time, and dispense them to the user. The communication mechanism and the intelligence designed into the poles provide the analysis to detect if an ambulance is passing, it will notify the poles ahead to clear the path by blocking a lane if required using the indicator screen and help the ambulance reach faster. It can switch on and off by tracking the time and presence of people and to reduce the intensity of the light to save power if no one present. Smart street lamps with monitoring, navigation and mechanism to support sanitization needs.

(57) Abstract :
 The invention relates to a machine learning-driven stochastic differential equation model for dynamic stock optimization in inventory management. The system integrates machine learning algorithms, which learn and predict from historical data, and stochastic differential equations, which account for randomness and uncertainty in the demand and supply processes. The model generates probabilistic forecasts of future stock levels and optimizes them dynamically, adapting to new data and changing market conditions. This innovative approach provides an effective solution to the challenges of inventory management, enhancing operational efficiency, customer satisfaction, and strategic decision-making across various industries.

(57) Abstract :

My Invention "A NEW APPROACH FOR ESTIMATION OF EIGEN VALUE AND EIGEN VECTOR" • we develop a new approach to estimation of characteristic equations, Eigen value & associated Eigen vector in minimum time. This invention help us to save time and gives appropriate result. Eigen value play very important role in our emerging technology. To obtain Eigen value by this method is far better and much reliable in comparison with other methods. In the end of the paper, application of Eigen values & Eigen vectors and role of spectral radii , are explained briefly.
